5,125

copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

Te-he-ran sounds like a joke, but the Persians know it isn't.

They are trying to take away the license of Governor Prouty's chauffeur who ran down and killed a bicyclist in Burlington. Looking the barn door afterwards may do some good.

Dr. William Osier, sixty years of age and still active, is a direct refutation of the theory that a man ought to be put out of existence at that age. Dr. Osier wisely concluded to spend his birthday on the ocean where no reporters could reach him and ask for his present views on the Osier theory.

It is a queer prize-fighting law in Pennsylvania which permits a prizefighter in which one fighter is knocked down six times and which does not allow the winner to be declared the winner. The Pennsylvania are trying to hide back of a mantle of righteousness just as the ostrich tries to conceal its body by sticking its head in the sand. The wonder is that the Pennsylvania law doesn't require the spectators to wear smoked glasses.

VERMONT'S FINANCIAL CONDITION.

If it were not for the shortage in the state's department of justice, Vermont's treasury would be in a far better condition at the present time than it was two years ago at the close of a legislative year. The report of the state treasurer, a summary of which is given in another column, shows that there is a balance of $109,551.85 available for current expenses and that deducting even for the $25,000 deficiency in the department of justice there would be some $84,551.85 still ahead. In view of the calamitous statements recently made this report is reassuring.

SOME AMERICAN SOLDIERS.

If all the United States regular troops were as gentlemanly fellows as the soldiers who visited this city yesterday afternoon while on their practice hike from the Plattsburg barracks to Augusta, Me., there wouldn't be much chance for complaint about their actions. The men who came to Barre from the temporary camp-ground at Interlaken park merited the generally favorable comment which was made of them. They were not of the blatant type of soldiery which brings the army into disfavor, but were quiet and reasonably reserved in their conduct.

THE SPIRIT OF PROGRESS.

Judging by the fact that a corporation has been formed to exploit granite which has been discovered at Barton, the good people of that town may have outgrown their aversion to the development of their resources because of the foreign workmen the industry would bring into the community. Then again perhaps not. Possibly those who are interested in the development have taken against the project. In either event, the have decided to open up the quarries whether public sentiment is for or many "unco guid" communities which decision to act is wise enough, for Barton will never know what its granite possibilities are until some steps are taken to uncover the formation; and we predict that the people of Barton will eventually outgrow their prejudices, well-founded or otherwise. There are many communities in Vermont which have been pleased to welcome these newcomers and they have profited thereby wonderfully. Then again there are many "unco guid" communities which have shuddered in horror at the thought of any but native-born being located in their midst. These latter towns remained and rotted in their self-complacency. They have slunk back on the traces of Vermont's industrial march and whatever advance the state has made has been done with them carried along as a dead weight. If there is wealth in Vermont's soil let's utilize it. Barton, then, is to be congratulated on these steps to determine just what its granite is worth, modest though the steps may be. With a capital stock of $5,000 the incorporators cannot hope to do a great deal of quarrying, but the amount can be increased if the examinations seem to warrant. Editor Gilpin of the Barton Monitor is one of those who has faith enough to lend his support, as an incorporator, to the undertaking and thus the company has a vehicle of booming at the start.

JINGLES AND JESTS

The Vain Mosquito.

Said the July-mad mosquito,
"I wonder why the mosquitoes
Don't initiate my song
I sing all night, and so do they,
Am I can beat 'em, night or day!"

"But the man there, 'neath the coverlet,
My music understands;
He's giving me an encore—
Just hear him clap his hands!
It's music I was born to teach,
But—keep me from my pupils' reach!"
—Atlanta Constitution.

Why He Repented.

Teddy—I wish I hadn't fought Jimmy Brown this morning.
Mamma—You see how wrong it was, don't you, dear?
Teddy—Yes, 'cause I didn't know till this afternoon that he was going to give a party.—Kansas City Journal.

Sure For Once.

Van Antler—I think we are sure of a good dinner tonight. You know my new English butler does the entire catering for the household.
Grub—Can you rely on him to—
Van Antler—Not always, but this evening I requested him to send us up something from the kitchen table.—Puck.

To the Point.

"There is a ring around the moon tonight," remarked the young man in the porch rocker. "Do you know what that means?"
"No," replied the fair occupant of the hammock, "but I know what a ring around a girl's third finger means."
And as there was only one way out of it, the y. m. went out that way—and bought the ring.—Chicago News.

So, What's the Use.

"Yes, I went fishing yesterday," began the man who tries to be original.
"Lack. Well, some. I caught two fish. One was three and a half inches long and the other two inches."
But was he believed? Not much. After he had passed on some one commented:
"Let he didn't even get a bite."—Kansas City Times.

Betrayed by His Disguise.

In one of the principal Western cities the proprietor of a large jewelry store reported to the chief of police an extensive diamond robbery. He was asked by the chief if he suspected anyone.

"Yes, sir," hesitatingly answered the merchant "although we have no proof. But a man whom I have known for twenty-five years was in the store a day or two before the robbery looking around and appearing to be ill at ease. He has since disappeared."
"What kind of looking man was he?" curiously asked a heavy mustache.
"Well," said the chief, after a moment's thought "I hope to be able to give you some news of him soon."

Then he sent this telegram to the police authorities of several other cities.
"Arrest tall man with close-cropped head, and white upper lip. Diamond thief."
The next day he received this dispatch from a town in Mississippi.
"Got a diamond thief. Have recovered goods. Am holding him subject to your orders."—Youth's Companion.

Leisure.

Except in certain remote provinces of the South and in those of our island possessions, where the Latin superstition still prevails and an ignorant populace believe enough in as good as too much, leisure has virtually gone out to the effect that the man who finds himself with time to chew his food is forthwith oppressed by an uneasy sense of being out of the current of affairs, the woman who isn't driven to death feels her position in society endangered, while the child who can sit down and keep still sinks under the reproach of being mentally defective.

Broad is the road that leadeth to destruction, but it isn't broad enough for the traffic and unless airships come on pretty fast there will be a serious congestion.—Puck.

BOTH TRIALS FAILED.

Orville Wright Was Hindered By His Limitations.

Washington, July 14.—Orville Wright late yesterday made two unsuccessful attempts to manoeuvre his aeroplane in the air at Fort Myer. The small area of the field and the unfavorable direction of the light wind blowing at the time were largely responsible for the failure of both flights attempted.

The machine arose from the ground on both occasions, but the aviator was obliged to make the turn at the end of the drill field before the "flying speed" had been attained and was compelled to come to earth.

On the first trial the machine rose a little more than ten feet and on the second trial a height of about 20 feet was attained. In the latter trial Mr. Wright failed to stop his motor before making a landing and the machine, in scraping against a little knoll broke the crossbar between the skids.

Wants Chauffeur's License Revoked.
Secretary of State Bailey has received a petition from State's Attorney H. B. Shaw of Burlington asking that the automobile operator's license issued to William H. Benware of Newport, chauffeur for Gov. G. H. Prouty, be revoked. The secretary took the matter under consideration and will give a public hearing on it at an early day.
